

Alabama Center
for Architecture

Capital Improvement Campaign

In June 2013, the Alabama Center for Architecture began renovations on a historic building in downtown Birmingham that would serve as the physical home for both the ACFA and the Birmingham chapter of the American Institute of Architects. Construction was completed in August 2013, and both organizations are currently running operations out of the ACFA building on Richard Arrington Jr. Boulevard.

The creation of the ACFA has been a huge success so far, but it needs funding to help it thrive. A capital improvement campaign was initiated in 2014 to raise money to pay off the initial renovation cost of $150,000. With your support, we can pay down our debts and continue to make the ACFA a place to educate our community about the value of architecture and design.
